OPERATIONS

November 1st 1950 saw a change in the unit organization, the 207th Air Service Group was eliminated and the base went under the wing base plan. This included the forming of the following units; 107th Medical Group, Col Wade B. Ellis; 107th Air Base Group, Col Henry H. Harper; and the 107th M&S Group, Lt Col Joseph W. Manske. The wing was under the command of Col Robert J. Kirsch. The 107th Fighter Group was destined to be moved to Syracuse on the 1st of July 1951.

The 107th FIG Clinic provides medical and technical wartime training necessary to maintain optimum readiness and the ability to mobilize in place and/or backfill existing military medical facilities. The clinic also provides medical support to maintain the combat readiness of the 107 Fighter Interceptor Group and the 136 Fighter Interceptor Squadron by providing various medical services supporting world-wide TAG Mission requirements.

Under the command of Colonel William J. Fiden Jr., the fourteen professional officers and twenty-seven enlisted technicians provide health care services in ten different medical arenas.

Professional officers/technicians are tasked with the management and operations of a Clinical Laboratory, Radiology Department, Pharmacy Facility, Patient Affairs Section, and Dental Services. Emergency medical services are available on a full-time basis looking after the health care needs of the Air Technician/Active Duty Staff as well as providing emergency services during the Unit Training Assemblies for the Traditional Guardsmen.

Bioenvironmental Engineering and Environmental Health Technicians maintain full-time staffing in order to comply with State of New York and Federal Regulations governing the operations and maintenance of military installations.

The professional medical and Nursing Officers bring with them highly technical civilian skills which greatly enhance the medical services available through the 107th USAF Clinic resources.

Providing complete medical care for Air Guardsmen during these two weeks of field training is the 107th Tactical Hospital, This unit operates a 15-bed hospital, dispensary and complete dental service.

On 29 July through 12 August 1978 the USAF Clinic personnel deployed to Griffiss AFB to perform annual field training.
