The 113th Communications Squadron was located at Camp Simms. Several federal inspections recommended its movement to Andrews where it could better accomplish its support for the Wing. After much study and coordination with Andrews, the unit moved into areas at Andrews previously occupied by Wing and Air Base Group Headquarters. (The Wing and Air Base Group Headquarters had moved into the new Operations and Training Building). This arrangement was short-lived as Andrews recalled all temporary buildings used by the DCANG. This required the 113th Communications Squadron to move into the Operations and Training Building, but the only available area was a locker room of 2,800 square feet. Later construction added a 13,000 square yard extension to the aircraft ramp and a 4,000 square foot extension to the warehouse. The ramp extension was occupied in June 1958, and the warehouse extension one year later.

113th Communications Squadron: federalized in the ANG 10 Feb 51 at Newcastle AFB, DE, as the 113th AB Group; inactivated 6 Feb 52.
