EMBLEM

2192 Communications Squadron emblem: The electronic flashes represent all forms of aerospace communications. The chain represents the critical link that communications plays in the command and control of aerospace forces. The control tower emphasizes the distinct but integral part air traffic controls plays in the command and control of aerospace forces. The eagle symbolizes the strength of all unit personnel in providing the critical command and control link. The olive wreath with arrows and the depiction of the globe stresses the capability of the unit to provide command, control, and communications in peacetime as well as in war, anywhere in the world.
