EMBLEM

Azure, a stylized Pegasus rampant Argent, eyed Gules, a lightning flash emitting from his nostril bend sinisterwise of the last garnished of the second, his body charged with a hurté, thereon a mullet White, charged with a torteau; all within a diminished bordure Or. Attached below the shield, a White scroll edged with a narrow Yellow border and inscribed "SEVENTEENTH AIR FORCE" in Blue letters. SIGNIFICANCE: Ultramarine blue and Air Force yellow are the Air Force colors. Blue alludes to the sky, the primary theater of Air Force operations. Yellow refers to the sun and the excellence required of Air Force personnel. For more than 2,000 years, the figure of the winged horse "Pegasus" has been common in the mythology of a dozen different cultures. In the Seventeenth Air Force emblem, Pegasus, symbolizes the unity by air of the vast area of the command, and courage and combat readiness which unites these elements. His wing is a modification of the traditional Air Force wing used in the insignia of every existing Air Force. The star and circle date back to the beginning of American Air Power. Pegasus is the symbol of those who stand ready to serve in an age where distance and time are no more a barrier than they were to his original owners. (Approved, 25 Jan 1955; revised, 5 Aug 2008)

After securing the approval of the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Company to use its symbol, Pegasus, in the Seventeenth Air Force unit emblem, 2Lt John B. Lawson designed the emblem in 1954. Lt Lawson was aid de camp to Seventeenth Air Force's second commander, Maj Gen Frederic E. Glantzberg.

Valor, Strength, and Unity

Motto coined by 1Lt Lawrence J. Green in 1969 while assigned to the 40 Consolidated Aircraft Maintenance Squadron at Aviano AB, Italy. Motto approved, 4 Mar 1969

OPERATIONS

Activated in 1953 to exercise area command responsibilities in North Africa, the Mediterranean and the Middle East. Upon moving to Germany in Nov 1959, assumed command of all USAFE units in NATO's Central Region in Western Europe; maintained readiness of units primarily based in West Germany; served as command element for coordination of air support to U.S. and NATO ground forces and air defense missions in the Central Region. Supported PROVIDE PROMISE and DENY FLIGHT operations in Bosnia 1992-1995. Activated in 2008 as the air component for US Africa Command (USAFRICOM).

Seventeenth Air Force inactivated in a ceremony here today and the Air Forces Africa flag and mission were passed to U.S. Air Forces in Europe. The numbered Air Force, which has also been known as Air Forces Africa, served as the air component for U.S. Africa Command. USAFE now takes up air component responsibilities for the African area of activity. U.S. Africa Command commander Gen. Carter F. Ham was joined by USAFE commander Gen. Mark A. Welsh III in overseeing the inactivation and transfer, both lauding 17th Air Force commander Maj. Gen. Margaret Woodward and her organization. Many of the Airmen formerly assigned to 17th Air Force have joined USAFE and 3rd Air Force and remain focused on the African mission. We may not have been the largest NAF in the Air Force but in my opinion we were certainly the best." In the almost four years since 17th was reactivated in October 2008 to coincide with the standup of AFRICOM as a unified command, the unit accomplished more than 200 engagement events with 36 partner nations in Africa. They also took planning and command and control responsibility for air operations in Africa. 2012
